Before Loch Raven was flooded, there were villages along its banks. We once attended an informative session at the Baltimore County Historical Society on the village and mills of Warren. Today, nothing can be seen, but the bridge across the reservoir on Warren Road is old and interesting architecturally. Likewise, the iron bridge on Paper Mill Road from the same era has been left in place while traffic moves along a relatively new modern span. The bridge along Dulaney Valley Road provides a better view of the lake, but the bridge itself is not scenic. In these days of keeping one's distance, a ride around the county and across the Loch Raven bridges is a great outing.Loch Raven Reservoir is a serene natural area nestled in Glen Arm, MD, offering visitors a peaceful retreat surrounded by lush forests and sparkling waters. With its scenic hiking trails, fishing opportunities, and abundant wildlife, Loch Raven Reservoir provides a tranquil setting for outdoor enthusiasts to connect with nature and unwind from the hustle and bustle of everyday life.Generated from their business informationYou may be trying to access this site from a secured browser on the server. It is open to the public for bird watching, fishing, boating, photography, horseback riding, hiking, archery, and deer hunting. Covering 1,600 acres, it surrounds the Raven, Loch Raven, and Gunpowder Falls, which are major tributaries of the Chesapeake Bay. The reservoir was formed in 1914 by damming the Big Gunpowder Falls and supplies drinking water to the surrounding counties and the City of Baltimore, located north of Loch Raven Reservoir.Birdwatching and the ability to reach optimal natural surroundings, Loch Raven offers a serene birdwatching encounter. Despite being situated in a residential vicinity next to the city, the wooded regions lining the reservoir are composed of fully-grown, diverse deciduous and coniferous woodland, as well as a few areas that have been recently logged. Additionally, there are multiple pathways available for birdwatching purposes.There are numerous old roads and foot-trails surrounding the reservoir. The map trail is available in a jpg version on his website, and it was prepared by the local resident Phil Manger. The link to the map trail is provided at the left. Additionally, there is a separate link for the mountain biking trail map of Baltimores City.Please refer to the directions below for the suggested driving route around the reservoir. This map is actually a parking map produced for hunters to use, so consult the Map Locations Parking section for places to park. The reservoir is surrounded by a network of roads that provide access to the foot trails and water. These roads include East Seminary Avenue (MD 131 Route), Providence Road, Raven Drive, MD Route 145 (Paper Mill Road), Warren Road, Merryman Road, and part of Jarrettsville Road. Additionally, MD Route 146 (Dulaney Valley Road) provides access to the water and foot trails.Birdlife: The top ten most efficient hubs are as follows: with a plethora of eBird hubs encompassing various regions, more than 240 bird species have been documented on eBird from Loch Raven and its adjacent territories.In general, Loch Raven Reservoir and Watershed have a total of 243+ species, which can be found at Raven Reservoir-Dulaney Valley Road Bridge (with over 135 species; visit .Loch Raven Reservoir-Loch Raven Point (with over 192 species; .The Loch Raven Reservoirs Northampton Furnace Trail harbors a diverse array of avian fauna, encompassing a staggering 153 different species. They can be found here during the warm months. Herons are also present during the warm months: Great Blue herons are here all year. Bald Eagles, Red-shouldered Hawks, and Red-tailed Hawks are also seen throughout the year. Many birds pass through during the spring and fall migration. They are present from spring to fall. They may be present, especially in the Paper Mills Flats area at the north end of the reservoir. They can be found near the water in the summer. They are present during migration and some stay throughout the breeding season. They may be found all year. Chipping Sparrows, Veeries, and Cedar Waxwings are common in the spring.Wheelchair Access:Restrooms are not available. Although the trails at Loch Raven are not suitable for wheelchair access, the parking areas and roadside pull-offs offer excellent opportunities for bird watching.Pet Policy:Leashed pets are permitted; please clean up after your pet and carry the pet waste with you upon departure.Parking:The map provided by Deer Area Management DNR displays the designated parking areas. It can be challenging to locate legal parking spots, as they are typically situated along the roadside. Vehicles that are parked illegally are subject to receiving parking tickets. For recommendations on parking, please refer to the instructions provided below.Special Features:Fishing is permitted in non-tidal state waters with a fishing license. Additionally, personal boats of these types may be launched here with a required permit. The fishing center also offers boat rentals, including electric-motor boats, jon boats, and kayaks. The fishing center operates a boat launch area and boat rentals are available at the Recreation and Parks County Baltimore center, located just east of the Dulaney Valley Road bridge over the reservoir.The Maryland Native Plant Society has provided access to a report by D. Earl Redmond (2004) called The Vascular Flora of Loch Raven Watershed, Baltimore County, Maryland, which provides information about the variety of plant species in the watershed. The City of Baltimore, responsible for overseeing the forests in the Loch Raven Watershed, ensures the purity of the drinking water from the reservoir.Local MOS Chapter.Output: Local MOS Chapter.The Bird Club of Baltimore is the founding chapter of the Maryland Ornithological Society, and it continues to be an important hub for birding activity in the state. The club offers monthly meetings with informative presentations, as well as field trips and walks in the bird-filled and scenic fields. The club is open to the public and free for all to join.Multimedia:The special episode of Maryland Outdoors, titled River Ribbon Blue, explores the rich natural diversity and beauty of the Gunpowder Falls watershed in Baltimore County. It also focuses on the controlled releases of water from Loch Raven, which plays a crucial role in maintaining optimal water temperatures downstream. Additionally, there is footage from Prettyboy Reservoir in the northern part of the county.Directions:The links on the left provide information about the Parking Locations Map and Trail Map. Additionally, having a well-designed printed road map would be beneficial. The itinerary will guide you on a tour of the reservoir in an S-shaped pattern, beginning from the southeast side. The trails and entry points mentioned here are highly regarded by birdwatchers.To reach the starting point from Baltimores I-695 Beltway, follow Cromwell Road Bridge and take Exit 29 to Drive Bridge Cromwell Road. Then, drive northeast on Route MD 567, following Raven Loch Drive until you reach the intersection with Loch Raven Drive.The route guide is accessible at the URL provided. Utilize the hiking pathways to access the secondary barrier by parking at Willow Grove Farm section of Cromwell Valley Park. Alternatively, a petite asphalted area close to the primary barrier can be located approximately 0.8 miles further north. Seek out a secure location to park near the secondary barrier on the right-hand side by making a left turn (towards the northwest) onto Loch Raven Drive from the northbound Cromwell Bridge Road. When the water level is low, dabbler ducks and shorebirds can be observed at the secondary barrier, which serves as an excellent location.The trail terminates on a peninsula and proceeds in an easterly direction near the water; the starting point of the trail is on the opposite side of the intersection. Please park on Chapelwood Lane, situated on the left-hand side, and search for MD Route 146/Dulaney Valley Road. Take a right turn (north) onto Seminary Avenue and keep going until you reach East Seminary Avenue. Take a left turn (west) onto Providence Road and trace it until you arrive at Providence Road. Take a left turn (southwest) onto Providence Road and travel northward to the primary dam on Loch Raven Drive.The eastern section of the bridge features roadside parking on the southern side, while the western section has a compact parking lot on the northern side. A popular destination for fishing enthusiasts is the footbridge, which offers a pair of petite observation decks and is situated on the southern side of the bridge. To access the reservoirs arm, one must travel north on MD Route 146/Dulaney Valley Road from Chapelwood Drive.Excellent for bird species that inhabit water bodies. The path takes you south along a narrow strip of land to reach the reservoir. Take a right turn at the upcoming road to access the trailhead for the Old Picnic Ground. As you proceed, you will come across the turn for the Loch Raven Fishing Center on your right. Keep to the right to remain on Dulaney Valley Road (Route 146 veers left at this point) after crossing the bridge. Continue your journey towards the north and east on MD Route 146/Dulaney Valley Road from the Dulaney Valley Road bridge. You will eventually reach Old Picnic Grounds Road.From the former picnic grounds, make a right (towards the east) onto Dulaney Valley Road and proceed a brief distance to the paved road leading into the Skeet Club on the right side. Parking is permitted near the junction with Dulaney Valley Road. Beyond the club structure, there are pathways that intersect each other throughout the peninsula. This location is favorable for observing sparrows, other small birds, and waterfowl. It is known as the Loch Raven Skeet & Trap Club.The Mill Paper Flats, which are located on the right side of park road, offer a short trail for visitors to enjoy. As you pass the intersection with Poplar Hill Road on the left side of the road, you will come across a pull-off area where you can park.To continue your journey, make a left turn onto Jarrettsville Pike (Route 146/Jarrettsville) and then take a sharp right turn onto Pike Jarrettsville MD. Just before reaching the bridge, make a left turn onto Dulaney Valley Road and the Skeet Club on the right side. This area of the reservoir is known for its abundance of both landbirds and waterfowl, with more than 200 species to be seen.Nearby Sites:Cromwell Valley Park, Fort Howard Park, Gunpowder Falls State Park Hammerman Park & Dundee Creek Marina, Hart-Miller Island State Park, Holt Park, Irvine Nature Center, Lake Roland, Liberty Reservoir Baltimore County, Marshy Point Nature Center, Milford Mill aka Villa Nova Park, North Point State Park, Northern Central Rail Trail (NCRT), Oregon Ridge Park, and Soldiers Delight Natural Environmental Area are all located in Baltimore County.Baltimore City: Cyburn Arboretum Druid Hill Park Fort McHenry National Monument Masonville Cove Environmental Education Center Patterson Park Habitats:Streams and Rivers Mud Flats (Tidal or Non-Tidal) Lake, Pond, or Reservoir Freshwater Marsh or Floodplain Forested Swamp Bushy Meadows Abandoned Fields, Suburban Neighborhood Upland Leafy Hedgerows Evergreens Leafy Lowland.Features:Bicycle Trails (Bikes may be prohibited on some trails)Boat or Canoe/Kayak LaunchFishingFree No Entry Fee at Any TimeHiking/Walking TrailsHuntingPets AllowedWater View Type:Hunting Locations: Ponds, Lakes, and Reservoirs along the Rivers of the Western Shore. If you have a picture or experience to share, please feel free to contact us Loch Raven Reservoir is one of the most pristine outdoor locations in the Baltimore metropolitan area, with resplendent plants and wildlife and beautiful water vistas where visitors can enjoy miles of hiking trails that wind their way along the banks of the reservoir. Hikers and bikers can expect to see a wide variety of birds, including ravens, cardinals, blue jays, woodpeckers, and even bald eagles, as well as a lush and varied array of plants and trees, including oaks, beeches, maples, poplars, raspberries, and wild roses.Loch Raven Reservoir has trails that are short, long, easy, and difficult; our Trail Maps can help you find a trail that best suits your hiking or mountain biking mood. Morgan Mill Road & Loch Raven Drive, Baltimore, MD 21057 (410) 356-9272Located north of the City of Baltimore, Loch Raven Reservoir is one of three city-owned reservoirs supplying drinking water to the city and surrounding counties. Loch Raven has been a dominant feature of the northern Baltimore County countryside for well over 140 years. The reservoir was initially created in 1881 by damming the Big Gunpowder Falls, a major tributary river of the Chesapeake Bay. A larger dam was constructed in 1914, with further dam enhancements in 1921-1922, resulting in a larger reservoir footprint and deeper water. At full capacity, the water surface now covers 2,400 acres and the depth of the deepest part is 82 feet; the shoreline of the reservoir is 50 miles long.The watershed lands surrounding Loch Raven, covering 8,000 acres, are owned by the City of Baltimore and are managed in partnership with the MD Department of Natural Resources as a Cooperative Wildlife Management Area (CWMA). The watershed lands are open to the public for archery hunting (deer), hiking, horseback riding, nature photography, boating, fishing, and bird watching. Although these recreational opportunities are allowed, management practices are aimed primarily at protecting the watershed and the quality of drinking water in the reservoir. There are few visitor amenities; for example, no public restrooms. The wooded areas bordering the reservoir consist of mature, mixed deciduous and coniferous forest and some clear-cut and second-growth areas, with numerous trails that can be used for birding. Unfortunately, the wooded areas are rife with invasive exotic plants, including several species of bamboo, English ivy, oriental bittersweet, Japanese honeysuckle, and many others. Along with a large deer population, the invasive plants are having a detrimental effect on the forests of the watershed. For example, in many areas, there is little native plant ground cover or understory.Still, although located in a residential area adjacent to the city, Loch Raven provides a peaceful birding experience and access to a large swath of woodland and open water. The watershed lands are scattered with the remnants of 18th- and 19th-century mills, farmsteads, and villages; often one will come upon an old graveyard or stone building foundations while hiking through the woods. There are numerous foot-trails and old fire roads surrounding the reservoir. The Trail Map provided at the link at left was prepared by local resident Phil Manger and is available on his website in jpg version. There is a separate link at left for the City of Baltimores Mountain Biking Trail Map. Heads-up: most of the old fire roads and the foot-trails are not being actively maintained and many are unmarked and may be challenging to follow. We recommend using a navigation app such as AllTrails; the free basic version can be downloaded to a smartphone and allows real-time navigation using satellite-based GPS.The network of roads surrounding the reservoir provide access to the foot-trails and to the water; major access roads areDulaney Valley Road (MD Route 146, in part);Jarrettsville Road (MD Route 146, in part);Merrymans Mill Road;Warren Road;Paper Mill Road (MD Route 145);Loch Raven Drive;Providence Road; andEast Seminary Avenue (MD Route 131).In addition, we note that Cloverland Park (94+species) is a relatively new eBird hotspot in the Loch Raven area. The species list here will grow larger over time. The 99-acre, county-owned park on Dulaney Valley Road is directly across the road from watershed lands, and is situated between the private Eagles Nest Country Club and Peeres Restaurant. The park contains grassy fields and hedgerows, and a power line cut with scrub-shrub habitat goes through the park. Entry is on a dirt and grass lane leading to a gravel parking area on a knoll. There may or may not be a portable restroom (seasonal) at the parking area. The park is sometimes, but not often, used for cricket and other field team sports.Consult the Loch Raven CWMA Parking Locations Map (this is a map produced by DNR for use by hunters) at the link in the At a Glance section of this webpage for places to park. See directions below for a suggested driving route around the reservoir.Birds:An aggregate total of over 275 species of birds have been reported on eBird from Loch Raven and its surrounding lands, with over 20 eBird hotspots covering parts of the reservoir. Ten of the most productive hotspots are as follows: Winter brings a selection of waterfowl, loons and grebes. They can be found here during the warm months. Herons can also be found in the warm months; Great Blue is year-round.Bald Eagles, Red-shouldered Hawks, and Red-tailed Hawks are also found year-round. Other hawks pass through during spring and fall migration. Ospreys are present spring through fall.A selection of shorebirds may be present, particularly in the Paper Mills Flats area at the north end of the reservoir.Swallows are found near the water in the summer. Flycatchers, vireos, and warblers are present in migration and some stay through the breeding season.Woodpeckers may be found year-round.Pine and Prairie Warblers are common in the spring, as are Song and Chipping Sparrows, Veeries, and Cedar Waxwings.Wheelchair Access:The trails at Loch Raven are not wheelchair-accessible, but there is fairly good birding at the parking areas and at the roadside pull-offs. There are good views from roadside parking spots along Loch Raven Drive just south of the intersection with Morgan Mill Road (Loch Raven Point area). No restrooms.Pet Policy:Pets are allowed on leash; pick up after your pet and take the pet waste with you when you leave.Special Features:Baltimore County Parks and Recreation operates a fishing center off Dulaney Valley Road just east of the bridge over the reservoir; the fishing center provides boat rentals and a launch area. Rentals includes canoes, kayaks, and jon boats with electric-motor boats; personal boats of these types may also be launched here, with a required permit, are permitted. Fishing is also allowed (requires state non-tidal fishing license).The forests of the Loch Raven Watershed are managed by the City of Baltimore to ensure the quality of drinking water from the reservoir. The diversity of the watersheds plant life is detailed in The Vascular Flora of Loch Raven Watershed, Baltimore County, Maryland, a study by D. Earl Redmond (2004), made available online by the Maryland Native Plant Society.Local MOS Chapter:The local chapter of the Maryland Ornithological Society is the Baltimore Bird Club. The Baltimore Bird Club is the founding chapter of the Maryland Ornithological Society, and remains an important hub of birding activity in the state. The club offers monthly meetings with informative presentations and a full schedule of field trips and bird walks, all free and open to the public. The club covers both Baltimore City and Baltimore County.Multimedia:Episode 3202 Blue Ribbon River: This special episode of Outdoors Maryland from Maryland Public Television explores the rich beauty and natural diversity of the Gunpowder Falls watershed in Baltimore County. Some of the footage focuses on the role of controlled water releases from Loch Raven in maintaining optimal downstream water temperatures for trout. There is also footage from Prettyboy Reservoir in the northern part of Baltimore County.Parking:Parking for many of the watershed trailheads is generally on the shoulder of the road and it may be difficult to find an open spot where you want to go, as many of the road shoulder parking areas accommodate only one or two cars. Illegally parked cars are ticketed.There are a few spots with well-defined parking areas; these include (click on links to go to Google Maps): Additional suggestions for parking are in the Directions below. The DNR Deer Management Area map shows some locations of additional legal roadside parking areas.Directions:The trails & access points described here are birders favorites and are good starting points, but the watershed lands around the Reservoir contain hundreds of miles of foot-trails winding through the mostly forested hillsides. The driving route described below will take you on an S-shaped tour of the reservoir, starting at the southeast end and ending at the northwest corner. See the Parking Locations Map and Trail Map at the links at left for details. A good printed road map or an app on your cell phone may also be helpful.To reach the starting point from the Baltimore Beltway/I-695-take Exit 29 to MD Route 567/Cromwell Bridge Road & follow northeast to the intersection with Loch Raven Drive. Secondary Dam: Good spot for shorebirds when water is low; also dabblers. From northbound Cromwell Bridge Road, turn left (northwest) onto Loch Raven Drive and look for safe spot to park near secondary dam on right. There is a small paved lot near main dam, about 0.8 miles farther north. Otherwise, park at Willow Grove Farm area of Cromwell Valley Park and use hiking trails to reach secondary dam. See trail map at link below. Northampton Furnace Trail: From the main dam on Loch Raven Drive, go north to Providence Road & turn left (southwest). Follow Providence Road to East Seminary Avenue & turn right (west). Take Seminary to MD Route 146/Dulaney Valley Road & turn right (north). There is shoulder parking for two or three cars on the east side of Dulaney Valley Road, directly across from the intersection with Chapelwood Lane. The trailhead is marked by a large Loch Raven Watershed sign; the trail goes east along a peninsula to end near the water. Dulaney Valley Road Bridge: From Chapelwood Drive, go north on MD Route 146/Dulaney Valley Road to the bridge that crosses an arm of the reservoir. The south side of the bridge has a a pedestrian footbridge that includes a couple of small viewing platforms. The pedestrian bridge is a favorite spot for fishing. There is a small parking area on the north side of the road at the west end of the bridge, and shoulder parking on the south side of the road at the east end of the bridge. The parking spot at the south end of the bridge also has a trailhead for the Merrymans Mill Trail, which winds through the woods for about 9 miles along the west side of the reservoir, with additional access points on Pot Springs Road and Warren Road. Old Picnic Grounds: From the Dulaney Valley Road bridge, continue north and east on MD Route 146/Dulaney Valley Road. After the bridge, bear right to stay on Dulaney Valley Road (Route 146 goes to the left here). Pass the turn for the Loch Raven Fishing Center on the right & turn right at the next road to reach the Old Picnic Ground trailhead. The trail leads south along a peninsula to reach the reservoir; good for waterfowl. Loch Raven Skeet & Trap Club: From the Old Picnic Grounds, turn right (east) onto Dulaney Valley Road & go a short distance to paved road into Skeet Club on the right. Parking is allowed near the turnout from Dulaney Valley Road. Past the club building are trails that criss-cross the peninsula. Good for sparrows, other passerines & waterfowl. Paper Mill Flats: The most productive part of the reservoir with more than 230 species seen, both waterfowl and landbirds. From the Skeet Club, turn left (west) onto Dulaney Valley Road & just before the bridge, make a sharp right (north) onto MD Route 146/Jarrettsville Pike. Follow Jarrettsville Pike to MD Route 145/Paper Mill Road & turn left (west). Just after passing the intersection with Poplar Hill Road on the left, and before going up the hill to the bridge, watch for a pull-off on the right side of the road. Park here. A short trail will take you to the Flats. Watch for tripping hazards such as roots and vines on the trail.Nearby Sites:Baltimore County: Cromwell Valley Park Fort Howard Park Gunpowder Falls State Park Hammerman Park & Dundee Creek Marina Hart-Miller Island State Park Holt Park Irvine Nature Center Lake Roland Liberty Reservoir Baltimore County Marshy Point Nature Center Milford Mill aka Villa Nova Park North Point State Park Northern Central Rail Trail (NCRT) Oregon Ridge Park Fort Soldiers Delight Natural Environmental AreaBaltimore City: Cyburn Arboretum Druid Hill Park Fort McHenry National Monument Masonville Cove Environmental Education Center Patterson Park Habitats:Bottomland Deciduous ForestsConifersHedgerowsUpland Deciduous Forests Suburban Neighborhood Old Fields, Shrubby Meadows Forested SwampFreshwater Marsh or FloodplainFreshwater Pond, Lake, or ReservoirMud Flats (Tidal or Non-Tidal)Rivers & StreamsFeatures:Bicycle Trails (Bikes may be prohibited on some trails)Boat or Canoe/Kayak LaunchFishingFree - No Entry Fee at Any TimeHiking/Walking TrailsHuntingPets AllowedWater View Type:Hunting AreasPonds, Lakes, and ReservoirsThe Rivers of the Western Shore Local Guides help millions worldwide discover new places by sharing local knowledge and experiences.
