Earthbound tips. Earthbound item guide. Earthbound what to do in threed. What order should i play earthbound.

EarthBound owned by Nintendo. Images used for educational purposes only. Part Eight: Lilliput Steps - A new town! Threed is not a pleasant place to visit at the moment, as it's full of monsters, the majority of which linger on the outskirts of town to the north and south: Urban Zombies are your base foes, though they actually don't show up that often in the streets. They have fairly standard physical attacks, and die more easily against PSI Fire. Zombie Dogs are slightly more vicious and a bit faster than plain 'ol Zombies, but are otherwise pretty similar. Watch out for their bites. Handsome Toms are annoying if only because they can put your characters to sleep. Fry them with Fire or Freeze. Smilin' Sams are pretty similar to Handsome Toms, and typically appear together in groups. They can cast Lifeup. Otherwise, not as annoying. Zombie Possessors can, as the name implies, possess your characters with ghosts. These little bastards will follow you after battles and occasionally freeze your characters when you get in subsequent fights. Blue-haired healers can get rid of 'em. Like most enemies in Threed, Zombie Possessors are best destroyed with PSI attacks, namely Paula's PSI Freeze line. Stinky Ghosts are almost invulnerable to physical attacks. Use PSI or flee. Putrid Moldymen are better handled with physical attacks, and can make your party members cry if given a chance. Try to kill them first to avoid this annoying status ailment. Trick or Trick Kids are strictly physical creatures. Not much to say, and you won't see 'em often anyway. No Good Flies are pretty weak, typically appearing in groups. PSI Fire will take 'em out with little fanfare. - We'll start with the west side of Threed's southern street and make our way east. First to the Drugstore, where you can purchase new equipment for your doodz. The trash can out front has nothing inside. - Down the street is a Hospital. Inside is the standard assortment of healing services. Check the first room on the second floor and, in the dresser, you'll find an Insignificant Item. Return this to its owner, a man in one of the rooms in Twoson's Hospital, and he'll give you a Truffle. Notice. The remainder of the street is rather useless, though you can find a Skip Sandwich in a trash can near one of the houses. - The fair grounds south of Threed are teeming with enemies and no use for anything besides levelling right now, so head north and wander back west, pausing just a moment to check the home in the northwest of Threed. The Hint Man lives here, and there's a Teddy Bear in the trash can out front of his home. - Head west past one of Threed's two graveyards. The houses here are little use, though you can find a Hotel along the way, and in the middle of town you'll find a Circus Tent. It'll figure into the game later. The only thing of potential use is the gun seller just south of the Tent, behind the Mach Pizza shop, and most of his stuff is not for Ness or Paula. - Head for the northwest graveyard in Threed after exploring the town as thoroughly as you please. You'll find a trash can containing an Insecticide Spray on your way to the corner of the map. Eventually you'll come to a pair of zombies who will not attack, but who won't let you through, either. They seem a minor thing, but these zombies must react to you to trigger the next step of the game. - Return to Threed and check out the Hotel. A blonde woman is flaunting herself outside. Follow her into the Hotel and, uh, you'll get into a smidgen of trouble. Ness and Paula will need more help to escape this pickle. Threed Sunset Hotel Threed Graveyard Zombie population: 2000 Average Temperature: 62 F Rainfall: 56" Pumpkin Patches: 12 Graveyards: 2 Dogs: 2 Lions, Tigers, Bears: 0 "Zombies and ghosts are on the loose here. Welcome to Threed." - A Threed resident Threed (/θri:d/Japanese: スリー, Threek), is the third main city visited in EarthBound. The first mentioning of Threed is when Ness arrives in Twoson. Some NPCs, especially around the Bus Station, will talk about ghosts inhabiting the Two-Three Tunnel which separates the two towns. Ness can attempt to cross the tunnel by foot or by bus, but the ghosts will stop him and make it impossible to emerge from the other side. After Ness rescues Paula and they pay the Runaway Five's debt, the band gives them a ride to Threed in their tour bus as compensation. Since the band plays loud and cheerful music when travelling through the tunnel, the ghosts are unable to stop them from passing through. When they arrive in Threed, the town is dark as it is overrun by Zombies and other monsters working for someone named Master Belch. Most of the town's people are either living in the immediate center of town or hiding in their houses, as the graveyard near the outskirts of town is where all the monsters are coming from. Ness and Paula first head to the back of the graveyard, but are blocked by two Zombies guarding a strange passageway. Upon their return to the center of town, the two are lured by a Mysterious Woman into a hotel room, where they are ambushed by zombies. Ness and Paula awake in a room under the graveyard, and discover that the exit is locked. Paula uses her telepathy to call Jeff Andonuts, a friend she has never met before. Some time later, the Sky Runner circles around the skies of Threed and crashes in the graveyard, straight into the room where Ness and Paula are being held. The friend, Jeff, emerges from the craft, introduces himself, and joins the party. He uses his Bad Key Machine to unlock the door, and the three climb the stairs and exit the graveyard. After wandering around town, they encounter Boogie Tent, a monster in the shape of a large circus tent. When he is defeated, the tent disappears and Zombies attempt to evacuate the materials inside, but they leave behind a trash can containing a Jar of Fly Honey. After Ness gets a call from Apple Kid talking about a new invention, the Mach Pizza deliveryman gives Ness and co. the invention, Zombie Paper. This invention is then used to attract and trap all the zombies in the Zombie Relief Corps's headquarters, a former circus tent at the center of town to end the threat against the town during the night. This means that the only way out of the town is the passage north of the graveyard leading towards Grapefruit Falls and Saturn Valley, which involves the defeat of Mini Barf at the end. Threed's monster problem ends and the town becomes bright when Master Belch is defeated in Belch's Factory. This also means that the tunnel to Dusty Dunes Desert is finally open. Later in the game, Ness, Paula, and Jeff return once more to retrieve the damaged Sky Runner from the underground cellar. The citizens of Threed, with a little help from Jeff, repair the machine so the party can go to Winters in it. Trivia Threed is one of the few locations in the game where no important non-player characters live. In its name, the word "three" appears (Threed), continuing the trend of Onett, Twoson, Threed, and Fourside. Threed was called Threek in Mother 2. The localization of Mother 2 to EarthBound changed from the town name from Threek to Threed; this leads to an error on page 40 of the EarthBound Player's Guide, which shows Threed as Threek in its maps. This change was most likely made to avoid making references to the KKK, as the name is "Three K", which is often associated with the Ku Klux Klan. Another result is the Happy Happyist cult. Threed is very similar to Spookane from EarthBound Beginnings. Both are heavily haunted by ghosts and most residents moved to a small area of the town. They are also both usually the fourth town visited. Among the game's unused characters are two men who live in Threed: One would have stood by the road opposite a trash can containing a Skip Sandwich, and his dialogue would be "I wanted to catch one of the Ghosts in the tunnel and keep it as a pet." Another is crucial to the game's plot. He is an investigator who informs Ness that the Evil Mani Mani statue was stolen from Carpenter in Happy Happy Village, and wound up in Fourside. In the back of the Player's Guide were six scratch and sniff cards (following the "This Game Stinks" marketing campaign in North America). The last card was a mystery scent, which turned out to be pizza. There was also a fill-in sheet where you would write in your answer. If you wrote either "Pizza" or "Nintendo" and sent in the sheet to Nintendo of America, you would receive an air freshener of Gonzales, the Mach Pizza delivery man. However, due to poor sales of EarthBound initially, these air fresheners, as well as the Player's Guide, have become rare collector's items in modern times. External links
