Stardew valley greenhouse tips. Stardew valley fastest way to get greenhouse. Stardew valley greenhouse bundle guide. Stardew valley greenhouse most profitable. Stardew valley greenhouse requirements. Stardew best greenhouse setup.

The Greenhouse is a building present on the farm from the outset. It is initially in a state of disrepair, making it unusable. It can be repaired by completing the Pantry Bundles for the Community Center or by purchasing "Greenhouse" from the Joja Community Development Form for 35,000g. Once repaired, it can be moved at the Carpenter's Shop. Basics The interior of the building features a 10-row-by-12-column plot of land. There, Crops can be planted, grown, and harvested at any time of year without reference to normal season restrictions. Scarecrows are not required in the greenhouse to prevent crows from eating crops. Crops do need to be watered, even on rainy days. There is a water trough along the north wall, where the Watering Can can be refilled. Crops that regrow will continuously regrow and not die at the end of any season. There is a wood border one tile thick surrounding the crop rectangle. It is possible to place sprinklers on this border to water any of the tiles of the crop land within its reach. Between the wood border and the greenhouse walls is a region two tiles thick that is unsuitable for crops, and populated along the walls with decorative items (plants, tools, barrels, water trough). It is possible to plant fruit trees at any spot in this region not occupied by decorations, so long as there are two tiles between fruit trees. Fruit trees cannot be planted in the corners of the Greenhouse. Neither the greenhouse wall nor the wood border itself will impede the growth of the fruit trees, although a one-space separation must be maintained between the tree and any items (like sprinklers) that are placed on the wood border or exterior region during the time the tree is growing. Advanced tips Warning: Spoilers This page or section contains unmarked spoilers from update 1.5 of Stardew Valley. Mobile players may want to avoid or be cautious toward reading this article. There are some additional special conditions about the greenhouse that bear mentioning: As with scarecrows, because the field is indoors, crops and fruit trees in the greenhouse will never be hit by lightning. Bee houses placed inside of the greenhouse produce no honey. Giant Crops are unable to be grown in the greenhouse. Multiple harvest crops and fertilizer will never disappear from the greenhouse unless removed by the player, or in the case of fertilized soil as long as the tile does not spend a night unplanted. This is also true on Ginger Island. A cheap seed such as wheat or parsnip can be used in such a case to keep the fertilizer intact. Because multiple harvest crops will never disappear at the end of season, this makes it especially profitable to plant Ancient Fruit, Strawberry, Blueberry, or Cranberry inside the greenhouse. Corn, Eggplants, and Hot Peppers are also affected by this, as well as trellis crops including Green Bean, Hops, and Grape. However, these are slightly less profitable and in the case of trellises, it is slightly harder to place them as they cannot be walked over. Arrangement Sprinklers and crops To use automated sprinklers to water crops, some soil tiles must be sacrificed to place the sprinklers. The growing area is too large for any sprinkler to water the center from any edge. In addition, the 12-by-10 shape of the farmable area cannot be covered only with the square shapes of sprinkler watering. The many possibilities yield various optimal sprinkler placements that cover the soil tiles while using the fewest possible sprinklers in plantable locations. Some sprinklers are inevitably placed on the wooden border. With iridium sprinklers, only 4 crop spaces (3.3%) must be taken, while with quality sprinklers, 12 crop spaces (10%) are occupied. Fruit Trees Fruit trees can be grown on any tile in the exterior region of the greenhouse that is unoccupied by decorations, so long as other tiles adjacent to each tree are empty of items the player has placed there. Neither the greenhouse walls nor the wood border around the crop rectangle alone impede fruit tree growth. Fruit Trees cannot be planted in the corners of the Greenhouse. In the greenhouse, fruit trees will always show their summer sprite. It is possible to grow as many as 18 fruit trees inside the greenhouse. One possible optimal placement is shown below. Gallery History 1.0: Introduced. 1.07: Trees can no longer be planted on perimeter tiles around the soil area. 1.1: Trees can once again be planted on outside perimeter tiles. 1.3.27: Trees can no longer be planted on top of decorations in the greenhouse border, or in the corners of the greenhouse. 1.5: Once unlocked, the greenhouse can now be moved at Robin's shop. Fertilizer in the greenhouse no longer disappears on season change in some cases. Anybody who's played Stardew Valley for a while knows that things get a little difficult during Winter, when the weather prevents anything from being grown outside and kills anything that was already there. Fortunately, there's a way around that. We'll show you how to unlock the Greenhouse and keep farming in the Winter. How to Grow Plants During Winter If you want to grow crops, the only way to do it is inside a Greenhouse, which provides earth for planting while also protecting the harvest from the cold. There's actually a Greenhouse on your farm when the game starts, but it's dilapidated and broken, currently unusable as anything but a big lawn ornament. If you want to restore it, there's one of two paths available to you. How to Get the Greenhouse If you want to get the Greenhouse, you can either do it by completing the "Pantry" bundle in the Community Center, or by paying Joja Community Development Projects. If you pick the first option, you'll have to amass five separate groups of items and put them in the frame in the storage room in the Community Center. You'll actually get rewards along the way for each section, so it doesn't feel quite so laborious. You'll need these items specifically: Winter can halt a farmer's progress overnight. | ConcernedApe Spring Crops Bundle Parsnip Green Bean Cauliflower Potato Summer Crops Bundle Tomato Hot Pepper Blueberry Melon Fall Crops Bundle Corn Eggplant Pumpkin Yam Quality Crops Bundle Parsnip (Gold Quality) Melon (Gold Quality) Pumpkin (Gold Quality) Corn (Gold Quality) Fix the Community Center, and they'll fix your Greenhouse in return. | ConcernedApe Animal Bundle Large Milk Large Egg Large Brown Egg Large Goat Milk Wool Duck Egg Collecting the crops is pretty straightforward, if rather a long-term chore, requiring you to do at least three seasons of work, and getting the Gold Quality crops means giving up on some real money-making fruit. Still, it's arguably worth it, especially considering this is still definitely the cheaper option. The Animal Bundle will require you to get some of the game's animals, though it is possible to get all of these items in the Travelling Cart, so make sure to check it regularly when it appears on Fridays and Sundays! After you've accumulated all these items and donated them, ending the day will reveal a short cutscene in which the Center's resident sprites - the Junimos - appear in your farm and rebuild the Greenhouse. It'll be usable from the day after that. How to Get the Greenhouse Through Joja Community Development Projects If you prefer other people to do your work for you, you could always give an absurd amount of money to the Joja Corporation. Head to JojaMart and purchase a membership from Morris for 5000g. This'll allow you to access the Joja Community Development Form, which essentially allows you to pay money for many of the improvements that the Community Center can do, and the Greenhouse is one of them - though it costs an exorbitant 35000g. Still, pay the money and Morris will have the Greenhouse built to be ready the next day, allowing you to do Winter planting. How to Use the Greenhouse Now accessible in your farm, the Greenhouse essentially functions like a normal field all year round. It's protected from random events and cold weather, but also doesn't restore or provide for plants. It won't water them for you, and won't even get them wet if it's raining outside; you'll either to water them yourself or put in a sprinkler. Still, it ensures you can keep crops going throughout the year, no matter what. They call me Mister Glass. | Joel Franey/USGamer. ConcernedApe Why not see what else Stardew Valley has to offer? You can find out more about the game's multiplayer here, or follow this guide to see how you can farm the rare and valuable iridium. In many ways, Stardew Valley is a game of momentum; you start with only bit of money and a handful of seeds to plant, and are expected to snowball them into a veritable farming empire. Throughout Spring, Summer, and Fall, you'll build upon the wealth you've amassed in the previous season in order to grow your number of planted crops, which increases your income, and so on. And then, in Winter, everything comes to a screeching halt. Snow blankets Pelican Town for the final 28 days of the year, rendering the soil unfit for tilling and planting. Instead of heading to Pierre's shop and buying seed packets as you would at the start of any other season, you're meant to focus your attention on other activities, living off of your saved money. Winter serves as a sort of test for the player, an exercise in preparation and foresight. If you're looking for how to survive the season, your best bet is to repair the greenhouse. Here, you can grow crops even while it's snowing outside. How to Repair the Greenhouse You may not be able to work the land outside during the Winter, but there's still a way to grow crops. It involves repairing the dilapidated greenhouse on your farmland, the one just west of your house. To fix it up, you're going to need to appease the Junimo spirits by completing a series of community center bundles. It's all the bundles in the Pantry series that'll you'll need to focus on. Here's what they call for: Spring Crops Bundle Parsnip Green Bean Cauliflower Potato Reward: Speed-Gro Supper Crops Bundle Tomato Hot Pepper Blueberry Melon Reward: Quality Sprinkler Fall Crops Bundle Corn Eggplant Pumpkin Yam Reward: Bee House Quality Crops Bundle Five gold star Parsnips Five gold star Melons Five gold star Pumpkins Five gold star Corn Reward: Preserves Jar Animal Bundle Large Milk Large Egg (Brown) Large Egg Large Goat Milk Wool Duck Egg Reward: Cheese Press Artisan Bundle Truffle Oil Cloth Goat Cheese Cheese Honey Jelly Apple Apricot Orange Peach Pomegranate Cherry Reward: Keg If you don't want to complete the bundles, you can also unlock the greenhouse by purchasing it for 35,000 gold via the Joja Community Development Projects. What to Grow in the Greenhouse Once you unlock the greenhouse, you can plant and grow crops inside just as you would outside. Here are the general recommendations on the best crops to grow here during Winter considering the 28 day time limit and crop growth/regrowth rates: Ancient Fruit - Fruit sells for 2200 gold each, or 4600 gold when made into jam, and 6600 when made into wine. Highest profit margin by far. Blueberries - Blueberries are a very lucrative fruit. They tend to produce three fruits per fully-grown crop, and sell for 1050 gold per unit. You can increase this by making jam and wine with them as well. Hops - Hops require a lot of attention, but the effort is well worth it. You can make upwards of 23,000 gold on one hops harvest if you manage your time right. Fruit Trees - Fruit trees are a good source of income as well. We suggest Peach or Pomegranate trees ourselves. And that's how to unlock the greenhouse in Stardew Valley, and what crops you should grow inside! What did you plant? Let us know in the comments section!
